ADDITIONAL DETAILS

This work was requested during a risk assessment performed to assess the future support requirements of ATMS. The process will follow the well-practiced failover test procedure (attached). Once failed over the spare boards will be testing in the failover AMS to check configuration. The system will then be failed back to the production AMS and the system retested ready for train control when they return to Mile End. The work is expected to take a full day, however retesting may be performed if the spare boards need further configuration.
